

Bullzi Security Wins Contract at Provident Bank

Lake Mary, Florida, October 13, 2007 – Bullzi Security Inc. (BLLZ.pk), a leading converged security provider wins security contract at Provident Bank, a full-service regional bank that services Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Washington, DC. Provident Bank has selected Bullzi Security as their security partner to help them protect critical information assets.

Thomas Welch, co-founder and President of Bullzi Security says, "We are pleased to have Provident Bank renew this security contract. We have been providing security consulting services to Provident Bank for the past 4 years and we're very happy to know that Provident Bank has the confidence in Bullzi Security to continue this relationship."

Mr. Welch went on to say that, "Regulatory programs such as Gramm-Leech-Bliley and Sarbanes-Oxley, as well as various identify theft bills, require that banks, credit card companies and other financial institutions follow a strict level of best security practices to protect client information. To meet this requirement, Provident Bank needed the support of knowledgeable and experienced information security professionals, such as those found at Bullzi Security."

Mr. David Wright, Security Manager for Provident Bank stated, "We've utilized the services of Bullzi Security for the past few years to help us ensure the security of our banking infrastructure. Based upon their past performance, we have renewed Bullzi's contract for another year to help us make sure that we are doing everything possible to protect our client's sensitive financial information. Bullzi Security analysts assess our systems, networks and banking applications on an on-going basis, as well as provide other essential security services."
